

Providing for a Sound Business Environment

Stable and Transparent Legal System

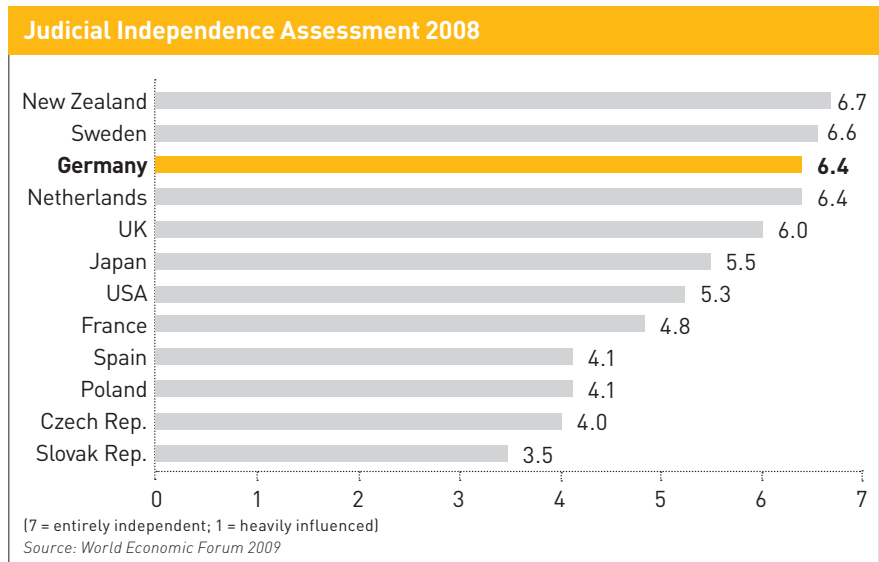

Germany is home to a legal environment rightly renowned for its stability and transparency. The World Economic Forum ranked Germany among the leading countries of 133 competitors for its judicial independence. Solid codifications and an effective enforcement system provide investors with a secure legal framework and the possibility to quickly enforce their rights.

A Safe and Secure Business Landscape

Intellectual property rights enjoy a high level of protection in Germany. For technical and commercial innovations, property rights can be registered in the form of patents, utility models, trademarks, and designs. The same conditions apply to foreigners as they do German nationals when registering property rights. The World Economic Forum ranked Germany among the leading countries in the "intellectual property" category.

Efficient Company Formation Procedures

Company formation procedures in Germany are swift and efficient, requiring only a few simple steps to establish a new company. Company establishment costs are moderate and more importantly, can be easily determined from the outset. The German private limited liability company (GmbH) is the most widely used legal corporate form in Germany. It combines high flexibility with relatively few obligations.

The GmbH Act underwent a complete review in 2008. The reform has facilitated the establishment and the running of a GmbH. For instance, the act provides a set of model articles of association, which can be used for uncomplicated standardized formations of a GmbH. Business investor rights are expressly set out and all business activities are legally secured. Public business registers provide transparent information pertaining to company legal representation and individual personnel authorized to conduct business transactions. This information is freely accessible to everyone. As such, the risk of fraud and manipulation is effectively negligible in Germany.
